NO DELAY

Will be Tolerated by the United States

In the Rescue of American in Hands of Bandits

The Matter is Now Up to the Commander of Fleet of War Vessels With Power to Act--An Armed Force May be Landed to Accomplish the Rescue.

Tangier, May 31.—Rear Admiral Chadwick, accompanied by an aid, the United States Consul General and two marines, Monday visited M. Torres, the representative of the Sultan at Tangier. The interview lasted ten minutes, after which M. Torres returned the visit at the United States consulate, the Brooklyn firing a salute in his honor.

The Brooklyn, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Chadwick, arrived yesterday morning. The cruiser Atlanta arrived later.

The authorities here consider that the position of the American, Ion Perdicaris and his stepson, Cromwell Varley, held by Raisuli's bandits, is now more serious that before.

The Sultan is willing to pay a ransom and liberate Raisuli's partisans, who are now imprisoned, but Raisuli reiterates his demand of American protection for the settlement. This last condition is considered dangerous upon the American government.

UNITED STATES WILL ACT.

Washington, May 31.—Western necessity will not wait upon Eastern procrastination. Ion Perdicaris and Cromwell Varley must be rescued in the shortest practicable period and their captors brought to speedy justice. This is the gist of the instructions sent to both Rear Admiral Chadwick and Consul Gummere, at Tangier. It is for them to devise ways and means and to judge as to method. As the situation is now understood here, the bandit Raisuli has made demands with which neither the Sultan of Morocco, Great Britain nor the United States can comply. Had Raisuli asked only money consideration pressure would have been brought upon the Sultan to force him to pay, but the injection of political matters makes the demand impossible, and apparently nothing is left but the employment of force against the bandits. In carrying out her purpose to rescue the men the United States will not consider the political status of Morocco. To recognize any treaty between France and Great Britain or between the first country and Spain, would be to embroil or at least to implicate, this country in European tangles, a thing forbidden by the constitution and repugnant to American policy. The administration finds that its course lies through three progressive steps: The Sultan must, by force or persuasion, secure the possession of the captives: should he fail France must go after the bandits in order to prove her right to include Morocco in her "sphere of influence." Lastly these methods having failed, the United States must land an armed force, recapture the two men and punish the brigands.

Raisuli's threats to put his captives to death will not act as a bar to the United States in her purpose of action. The officials, of course, feel strongly that death is a contingency to avoid if possible, but delay in moving in the matter will hardly give the unfortunate men a stronger chance for life while prompt and energetic methods will add to the American reputation an element which will tend to discourage cut throats abroad from repeating the Perdicaris and Ellen Stone way of making fortunes quickly.

THE WARLIKE MOROS OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The Moros of Mindanao, with whom the United States troops under Major General Leonard Wood are now having considerable trouble, are Mohammedans and polygamists. They are savage fighters and give no quarter. The upper picture shows a group of typical Moro fighting men. Below are half a dozen Moro fishermen.

VOLLEY

From Four Men, Whom He Tried to Arrest, Killed Letcher County's Deputy Sheriff.

Sergent, Ky., May 31.—James Day, aged 50, a deputy sheriff of Letcher county, was fatally shot and William Haynes, aged 21, a teamster, was dangerously wounded, Sunday night near Whitesburg.

Day, hearing the report of dynamite, went to the river to investigate. He met four men, whom he ordered to surrender. They, however, commanded him to throw up his hands. Day complied but by carelessly handling his revolver it was discharged in the direction of the men. The latter responded with a deadly volley at Day.

In his last testimony Day said two of the men were John D. Fugate and Riley Caudill, son of Representative Caudill. They were placed in jail.

NEGROES

FIRED ON THE STRIKERS MONDAY AT IRONTON

Over Two Hundred Shots Exchanged But as Far as Known no Fatalities Resulted.

Ironton, O., May 31.—The strike of the employes of the Hamilton furnace, three miles below this city, has assumed an alarming condition. The strikers, about 200 in number, and the nonunion men are heavily armed with rifles and shotguns, and that section of the country is terrorstricken.

Monday evening at 5:30 o'clock strikers to the number of twenty opened fire on a church building, which is occupied by about 18 or 20 colored persons, the greater part of whom are nonunion employes of the furnace, and the fire was returned with Winchester rifles. More than 200 shots were fired, but as far as could be learned there was no fatalities.

Strikers and employes paraded the streets of the village with guns on their shoulders, and it seems that a reign of lawlessness is at hand.

Albert Sperry, a non-union employe, who resides in Ironton, was set upon when he left the furnace Monday evening and beaten into insensibility by four strikers. His condition is critical.

Representatives of the company are authority for the statement that Town Marshal Woolum is allied with the strikers, but this could not be verified.

It is also reported that a negro was killed in the shooting, and his body was immediately buried under the river bank.

Police authorities of this city were asked last night to take a hand in the trouble. An outbreak is hourly expected, as the situation is intense.

LETTER CARRIERS

Of Ohio Met at Piqua, Elect Officers and Choose Zanesville For Next Meeting.

Piqua, O., May 31.—The Ohio State branch of the National Association of Letter Carirers met here Monday. The following officers were elected: President, Charles A. Saunders, Findlay, Vice President, E. E. VanPelt, Cleveland; Secretary, Melvitie Johnson, Columbus; Treasurer, Louis Gabel, Piqua; Executive Board, John T. Magufin, Cincinnati; C. A. Lackey, Dayton; Albert M. Tell, Zanesville.

The next annual meeting will be held in Zanesville. The delegates were tendered a banquet in the Plaza Hotel by the local board.

While scores of people were running from a supposed mad dog in New York a black tomcat sprang upon the animal's back and it quickly disappeared, yelping as it went.

It is claimed for Wesleyan Female College at Macon, Ga., that it is the oldest chartered female college in the United States, and in fact, in the world.

BULLET

Ended Life of Baltimore City's Mayor

SAD TRAGEDY CLOSES SHORT HONEYMOON

Robt. McLane Committed Suicide Monday.

ALMOST IN SIGHT OF WIFE

To Whom He Had Only Been Married Since May 14—No Cause Given.

Baltimore, Md., May 31.—Mayor Robert M. McLane of this city, shot and killed himself at his home Monday afternoon in his bedroom at his residence, No. 29 West Preston street. His bride of less than two weeks was at the time of the tragedy asleep in an adjoining room, and was awakened by the discharge of the revolver, which Mr. McLane evidently fired while standing before the mirror of the dressing case. The bullet entered the right temple, and crashing through the head, escaped in the rear of the left ear. Mrs. McLane and other members of the household rushed to the mayor's assistance, but he did not regain consciousness after he fell to the floor, and expired within an hour, a number of physicians who were immediately summoned having expressed the opinion that the wound was necessarily fatal.

No cause can be assigned for the act by the members of Mr. McLane's family. Since the first of last February he has been kept assiduously at work administering the affairs of the city, besides endeavoring to direct the rehabilitation and rebuilding of the burned district. This, together with the criticisms by his political opponents, are thought by many to have caused a temporary aberration of mind.

Mayor McLane was elected as a Democrat to the office of chief magistrate of the municipality in May, of last year, for a term of four years. Under the city charter, he will be succeeded by E. Clay Timanus, Republican, president of the second branch of city council, to serve out the unexpired term. The second branch of the council, which is Republican, will elect a president, not necessarily a member of the present body, to preside over its deliberations.

Mayor McLane was 36 years of age, the youngest chief executive Baltimore ever had. He was the son of James L. McLane, president of the First National Bank, and nephew of Robert M. McLane, former governor of Maryland and United States Minister to France during President Cleveland's first administration. Previous to his election as mayor he had for four years filled the office of state's attorney, in which he had distinguished himself by zealous and intelligent discharge of his duties. During his brief administration of the mayoralty office he had brought upon himself the antagonism of the regular Democratic organization by the appointment of independent members of the party. Recently there has been marked opposition to him among Democratic members of the city council on matters relating to the rebuilding of Baltimore, and this is ascribed by many as a contributory cause of suicide.

Mayor McLane has married two weeks ago to Miss Mary Van Pilsber, a well known and popular society leader of Baltimore, and the newly-made bride is prostrated by the terrible tragedy.

The dead mayor was very popular among the people generally, irrespective of party, and the whole community has been profoundly shocked by his tragic end.

BIG SHED

Being Built By Wets to Avoid a Brannock Law Election in Columbus.

Columbus, O., May 31.—In order to beat the "Drys" in a proposed election in a district mapped out in the neighborhood of High street and Euclid avenue, the "Wets" are building "business houses," so as to bring High street, on Euclid avenue, in exceptional territory.

One side of the street contains more than 55 per cent business, and in order to make the other side "business," a shed 30 feet long and 8 feet wide is being constructed. It is said this will be used by a manufacturer of screens.

The "Drys" will fight the matter in the courts so as to determine if the Brannock law provisions can be avoided in this way.

FLANGE

ON A FREIGHT CAR BROKE CAUSING WRECK

Near Zanesville, Which Involved Property Loss of $10,000 to B. & O.—General and Local News

The Zanesville Courier contains the following account of the wreck that occurred on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad a short distance east of Zanesville on Sunday night, and which entailed a loss of nearly $10,000:

"B. & O. westbound freight train No. 27 was ditched three miles east of the city and just west of Rocky Point curve Sunday night at 11:30 o'clock. Ten cars loaded with coal left the rails and piled up. The bank at that point is about twenty feet high and several of the cars were hurled entirely out of the right of way. About six hundred feet of track was torn up but no one was injured. The wreck trains from Newark and Benwood were summoned and the track was cleared at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning. The damage to rolling stock and the track is heavy.

"About midnight Sunday night, westbound train No. 27 was running down off the long hill east of the city at the rate of perhaps thirty-five miles an hour. A flange on the tenth car from the engine broke while the train was rounding Rock Point curve. The ten cars imediately behind also left the rails but the train was brought to a stop before the entire train was wrecked and about fifteen cars were left on the track.

"The train was a heavy one composed of loaded coal cars. The terrific momentum twisted the heavy rails into various fantastic shapes. One rail was broken sharp off and several twisted into the shape of the letter S. Two of the cars were hurled over the embankment to the county road fifty feet beyond where they lie totally wrecked. Six others were cast bodily over the bank.

"The Newark wreck train made the run to this city in forty minutes and the work of clearing away the debris began at once. Shortly after the Benwood train arrived with the steam derrick. This made short work of the cars encumbering the track. A large force was put at work on the track which was opened in a remarkably short time. Number 7 was delayed about an hour by the accident. The majority of the cars can be replaced on the track but one or two will be burned."

BRAWL ENDS IN FATAL SHOOTING

Springfield, O., May 31.—Edward Boone was probably fatally shot Monday in a saloon brawl by Walter Fisher. They had a quarrel in George Harley's saloon over the payment of the drinks and Fisher shot Boone in the stomach.

Fisher disappeared and Boone was taken to the hospital. The shooting will probably result in the closing of this saloon, as Harley, who was the proprietor of the Honky-Tonk on the levee, was allowed to open on promise to run an orderly place.

PORT ARTHUR

To Be Captured by June 15, is the Program

Dalny is Now Occupied by the Japanese Soldiers

Russians Sink Gunboats That Attempted an Attack --Kaiser Accused of Violating Neutrality--It is Thought the War Will Now be Fought Out.

London, May 31.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Tokio says it is expected that the attack on Port Arthur will begin on June 15. The correspondents will leave Tokio on June 10 in time to see the capture of Port Arthur, which is expected to occur about June 20.

Che Foo, May 31.—A Manchurian merchant here claims he has information that the Japanese have occupied Motien Ling pass in the mountains one hundred miles northwest of Feng Huang Cheng, and directly east of Liao Yang. This is the only pass through the mountains on the road to Liao Yang and it has long been expected that the Russians would take a firm stand here to prevent the further advance of the Japs. The place is almost perfectly adapted to a defensive fight, being narrow and between high walls, making it posible for a comparatively small force to resist a much stronger one.

Word also reached here today that during some reconnoitering at Port Arthur yesterday one petty officer on gunboat No. 8 was killed and three others were injured. One gun was damaged. Details are not given.

REPORTED JAP LOSS.

Mukden, May 31.—A report reached here today that the Japanese had lost one gunboat and two torpedo boats in an attack on Port Arthur on Saturday.

The attack was made in an attempt to block the harbor of Port Arthur.

The searchlight on shore discovered the approach of the Japanese. After the Japanese gunboat and two torpedo boats had been lost the merchantmen which were intended to block the harbor entrance withdrew.

JAPS OCCUPY DALNY.

Washington, May 31.—The Japanese legation received the following official dispatch this morning:

"Tokio, May 31.—General Oku, commander of the army operating against Port Arthur, reports that our troops occupied Dalny on May 30. Over 100 warehouses and barracks, besides telegraph offices and railway stations were found uninjured. Over 200 railway cars are still useable, but all small railway bridges in the neighborhood are destroyed. All dock piers, except the great pier, which was sunk launches are also sunk at the mouth of the dock."

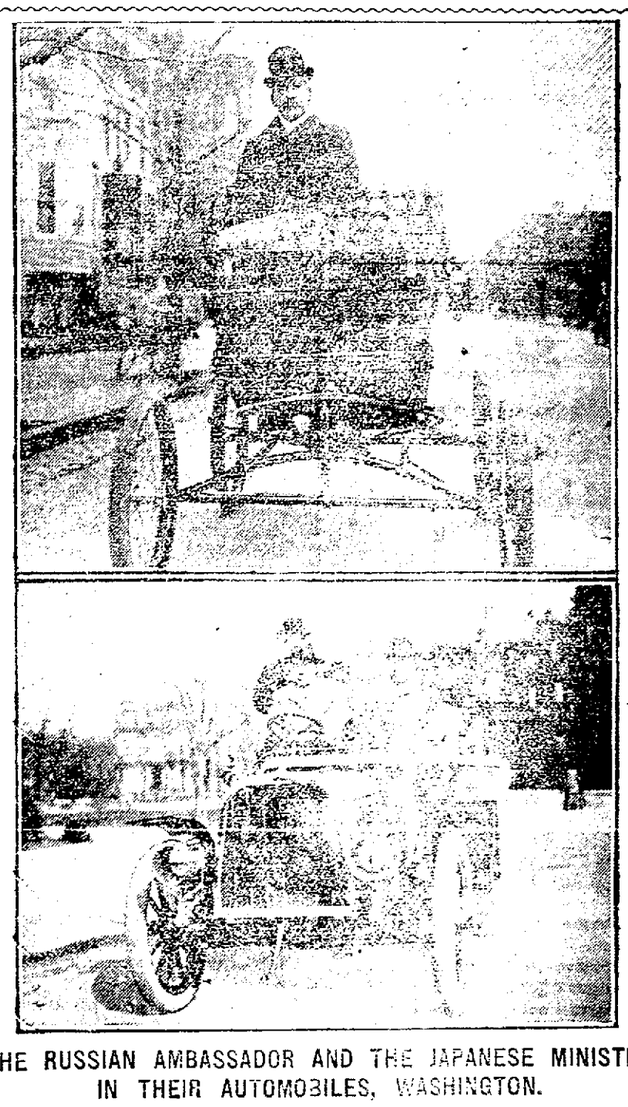

THE KAISER

Writes Letter to Russian General in Violation of Neutrality.

Berlin, May 31.—(Bulletin)—It has transpired that the letter, which the Kaiser recently sent to General Kuropatkin by special courier, contained lengthily expressed views as to the probable developments of the war. His Majesty criticised the weak points of Russia and advised General Kuropatkin how he could best conduct the campaign. The Kaiser addressed his letter as coming from one soldier to another."

The sending of the letter, however, is taken here as an act of indiscretion

THE RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR AND THE JAPANESE MINISTER IN THEIR AUTOMOBILES, WASHINGTON.

In Washington the Russian ambassador, Count Cassini, and the Japanese minister, Kogoro Takahira, do not speak as they pass by in their automobiles. Thus far, despite the rancors of war, they have not collided, fortunately for the Russian minister, whose machine, shown in the upper picture, is much lighter than the big "choo-choo" car operated in the lower cut by the mikado's representative.

DIAMOND

Stolen From Animal Trainer While in Newark Has Been Recovered By Mr Conklin.

William Conklin, the head animal trainer with the Barnum & Bailey circus, who had a $500 diamond pin stolen from him while in Newark last Thursday, is again in possession of his diamond. He offered a reward of $50 for its return and on Tuesday a fellow who gave his name as W. L. Harris, returned the pin, with the expectation of securing the promised reward. Instead, however, he was railroaded to the workhouse at Columbus. It seems that Harris secured the diamond from another crook. Both men were rounded up and will do time at Columbus.

BASEBALL

LADIES' DAY ON FRIDAY HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED

Toledo Futures and Urbana Scheduled For This Week—Will Strengthen Team—Baseball Gossip.

Owing to the fact that the management of the Idlewilde base ball club has received excellent patronage from the ladies, it has been decided to admit members of the fair sex for 15 cents instead of 25 cents Wednesday, when the Toledo Futures play here. Children will also be admitted for 15 cents.

Friday when the great Urbana team plays here ladies will be admitted free. Every lady will be a welcomed guest and will be admitted to both to the grounds and grandstand free. Manager Driscoll is pleased with the class of ladies who attend the ball games.

The Futures of Toledo are now the champions of Northern Ohio and are on a two weeks' trip through southern Ohio. They play Idlewilde Wednesday and a good game is expected.

The Zanesville team, which was to have played Idlewilde at 10 o'clock came to Newark by the C. N. & Z. road, but were unable to play because of rain. Both the Zanesville and Newark teams went to Zanesville in the afternoon but rain also interfered with the second proposed game. The inclemency of the weather is greatly regretted as both games were expected to draw large crowds.

Efforts are being made to strengthen weak spots on the Idlewilde team and in a few days Manager Driscoll will have some new players here.

Snyder pitches against Toledo Wednesday.

O. S. U. at Granville Wednesday.

Ohio State University's baseball team will play Denison University at Beaver field Granville, on Wednesday afternoon. This is one of the most important games on Denison's schedule.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes: "A patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles, so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Hall's Drug Store.

GOOD THINGS IN SEASON.

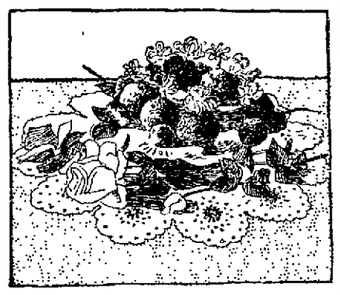

Refreshing Green Vegetables—Bluefish—Strawberries.

Radishes and rhubarb are now in season in many of our gardens; beets and turnip tops, as well as young lettuce, are, or ought to be, available, thus giving us the green vegetables required at this season of the year.

In preparing radishes as a side dish leave on them about an inch of the stems, as this is said to make them more digestible. Heap on a dish and sprinkle with finely chopped ice. When added to a salad they should be thinly sliced, the scarlet edges adding a touch of dainty color to the dish.

Asparagus, as its season is comparatively short, ought to be served at least twice a week, especially as it has a direct and very beneficial effect upon the kidneys. Each stalk should be scraped with a dull knife, an inch of the dry lower end cut off, then tied in small bundles and boiled in salted water—from half to three-quarters of an hour's cooking will be needed. If it is to be served cold as a salad, it is then set aside. As a vegetable it requires a drawn butter sauce made wholly or in part with the pot liquor. It is also best to serve it on slices of toast dipped for an instant in some of the pot liquor before arranging on the platter.

Shad is slowly disappearing from market, and in its place comes bluefish, one of the best salt water varieties for broiling and baking. In broiling this, or any large fish, the split halves are laid in a greased broiler, and the flesh side is given the longer cooking. After the first searing it is raised from the coals, that the flesh may be thoroughly cooked without burning. During the broiling it should be moistened several times with a little melted butter; season with salt, pepper, a little lemon juice and a drop or two of tabasco or worcestershire. For baking, the fish should be stuffed.

STRAWBERRY CROQUETS.

The illustration shows strawberry croquets. Each large berry has been dipped into beaten egg and rolled in fine stale sponge cake crumbs. This dipping and rolling are repeated; then the balls are plunged into smoking hot fat and quickly browned. When laid on a napkin, each croquet is pierced with a tiny ornamental skewer, and the dish is garnished with fresh berries.—Table Talk.

English Cherry Pie.

One cupful of lard and butter mixed, two cupfuls of flour and a teaspoonful of salt. Work the shortening into the flour with a knife, mix with sufficient ice water to hold together, handling as little as possible. Line the sides of a deep earthen baking dish, fill two-thirds full with stoned cherries, add two cupfuls of sugar and place a small cup inverted in the center of the dish. Cover with a thick top crust, no bottom crust being used. Spread over the crust a liberal coating of lard or butter before placing in the oven. When done raise the crust carefully and remove the cup, allowing the contents to flow through the pie. The juice never boils over when confined in this manner, as is too frequently the case with fruit pies.—Exchange.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Cumrox; "when he used to say the weather was bad, he now says 'the climate is beastly.'"—Washington Star.

Spinach In French Style.

The French prepare spinach by a superior method. When the spinach is boiled thoroughly tender and properly salted, of course free from every trace of grit, throw it in the colander and drench with cold water. This gives it a certain firmness and delicacy attained in no other way. It is to be shaken free of water, chopped fine, placed in a hot saucepan and stirred with a tablespoon of butter and two of cream until hot. Then heap in a mound in a dish with poached or boiled eggs on top.

Lemon Shortcake.

Make a rich cake, split and butter it; then take the rind, juice and pulp of three lemons grated, one cup of sugar, one cup of cream, mix thoroughly and spread.

Che Foo, May 31.—A Japanese gunboat, No. 3, according to a report received here today, was damaged by shells from the Port Arthur forts yesterday The gunboats was reconnoitering near shore and drew the fire from the fortress, which killed one petty officer and injured three others. One gun was badly damaged.

WILL NOW FIGHT IT OUT.

Sa. Louis, May 31.—If Russia would agree to withdraw from Manchuria and consent to the things we asked for before the outbreak of hostilities, Japan undoubtedly would listen, but I do not think of that kind is likely to occur just now." In this manner Koiogo Takahira, Japanese minister to the United States, summed up the diplomatic situation in the war, after his arrival here Monday night. He said that both nations were disposed to fight out the struggle at least for some time to come.

BEAUTIFUL CHERRY VALE PARK

A Veritable Earthquake in the West End.

Practically all the Lots in our First addition closed out and sold within a week.

We reserved the choicest part of our land, but have now decided to place the rest of it upon the market. There are, all told, only 84 large lots, none less than 50 foot front by 150 feet deep to a 15-ft. alley. There are several fine old forest trees on these lots. Several of these lots are already sold and remainder will go quickly

28 on Church Street and 56 on Lawn View Ave.

We are now grading these streets and shall set trees this fall the same as our first sub-division. We secured the option on this land before we opened Cherry Vale Park otherwise we could not have bought it, in acres, for what we are offering it for in lots now.

We intended to keep this land until the Bridge and cars were established on Church Street and then open it up at from $500 to $600 a lot, but have yielded to the demand and pressure for more lots now than we can supply. If these lots sell as they did last week they will last only a Few Days.

We shall offer these lots at the remarkable low price of $175 to $200. A few choice corners $225. They are worth $500 to $600 each. The profit is to the buyer of the single lots. We will not sell more than 2 Lots to one Person. Giving to everyone a fair chance.

Read Our Proposition

Only $5.00 down, then only $1 a week until paid for. No interest, no taxes until paid for. Payments stop in case of illness. Absolutely free deed in case of death. No matter how little has been paid, not a cent more is required if the purchaser dies; a Warranty Deed with good title given to the estate or family at once.

Where Is It?

Just one and one-half miles due west of the Court House. That beautiful high plateau lying between the Granville Street Car Line, Cherry Valley Road, and Church street extended, just east of the State Encampment Grounds, just outside the city limits and high taxes, and from which a grand view of the entire city and surrounding country can be had. The most beautiful, and at the same time the most Healthful, Sanitary and Clean place about the city. No Smoke, no Malaria, and still within Easy Walking Distance from the Wehrle Stove Works, The Newark Machine Company, The Jewett Car Co., The Fee Lumber Yards, The Newark Gearwood Co., and other factories employing over 3000 men. It is also accessible to all factories in the city. Only one street car fare to any part of Newark. Labor tickets morning and evening. The difference in taxes will pay your fare. Cellars 10 feet deep without a drop of water in them. Drive wells with the finest water may be put down any place at an expense, with pump and all complete at from $5 to $8.

How to Reach Cherry Vale Park.

Take the Granville car leaving the Suburban station on every hour. get off at the Brick School House east of the State Encampment Grounds, and walk north a short distance to our allotment. You cannot miss it. We have purchased these beautiful grounds for cash. We have laid them out in large lots, mostly 50x150 feet to a 15 foot alley. We are grading the streets in good shape and will set 2 rows of Fine Nursery Trees on each side of each St., making of this land a Veritable Park, the same as Fairlawn and Woodlawn avenues.

The Title Has Been Conveyed to The Newark Trust Co., one of the most, if not the most, reliable and substantial banks in Licking County, and with which Newark's best and most substantial business men are identified. This Trust Company will collect all the money paid in on these lots, and make warranty deeds to each purchaser as soon as lot is paid for, thus insuring absolute safety to all concerned.

We Offer You an Investment That Cannot Fail.

Banks may fail. Personal property may be destroyed. Money may be burned or stolen. Other investments may depreciate in value or fail entirely, but an investment in Cherry Vale Park cannot fail or depreciate. You buy it for less than half its value. They will all be sold within a short time, this will double their value. The growth of the city and the immutable laws of nature compels a steady increase in value. As the city grows new territory must come in. Nothing else is so available or fine as this for an addition to the city

The fact that 150 lots are already sold, many to be improved at once enhances the value of all Property in this Vicinity.

It is a great satisfaction to own your own home. It is a solace to old age.

No interest, no tax on these lots. You know just what you have to pay.

You get a warranty deed from The Trust Company and a certificate showing perfect title.

All payments to be made at The Newark Trust Company.

We do not ask you to buy these lots on faith. Come out at our expense and look the property over. Free Car Tickets on the allotment, if you come out, whether you buy or not.

Come at once while you can have your choice. Every lot is a great bargain and they will go quickly on these terms.

Licking County's Nominee for Congress,
E. M. P. BRISTER.

Licking County's Nominee for Congress.

Judge E. M. P. Brister is Licking county's nominee for Congress. He was nominated at the Democratic primary election on Saturday, and is the nominee of the county just as much and in the same sense as the candidate who was nominated for any other office is the nominee of the county.

Judge Brister is entitled to and will receive the united support of Licking county's fifty-four Congressional delegates at the Congressional convention just as the nominees for county offices are entitled to and will receive the unanimous support of the county at the election this fall.

This method of nominating a candidate for Congress from this county is a new thing in Licking county, and is decidedly a step in the right direction. Heretofore Democrats in Licking county aspiring to the Congressional nomination, would hustle around and get as many of their friends as possible to run for delegates to the Congressional convention. The consequence would be that each candidate would have a few delegates and Licking county would go into the convention all split up and her candidates would be defeated. To prevent this result and to put Licking county on an equal footing with the other counties, who each have but one candidate for congress, and that candidate was permitted to select his own delegates, the present method was adopted. Licking county now has one Congressional candidate, Judge E. M. P. Brister, who will receive the solid vote of her delegates in the convention, and will thus be effective and can hope to make the nomination.

In addition to starting in with fifty-four solid votes at his back, Judge Brister has some other advantages over his opponents in Wayne and Tuscarawas counties. It is recognized very generally over the district that this is really Licking county's time to have the nomination, as she has never had the nomination in this present district, and has only had two congressmen in fifty-six years. Besides this, Judge Brister is personally known in every county in the district, and has personal friends in every county who will gladly rally to his support when the break comes. Let the Licking county delegates stand firm, and they will bring the Congressional banner back to Licking county. This will bring innumerable benefits to the county—the nomination and election of a Congressman here, and it will have the effect of strengthening our party in Licking county and increasing the vote all along the line for our Democratic county ticket this fall.

Rally to the Congressional Convention.

It is to be hoped that a large delegation of our Democrats and public spirited citizens will attend the Congressional convention at Coshocton on Thursday and help boom Licking county's candidate—Judge E. M. P. Brister—for the Congressional nomination.

In addition to the Licking county delegation who are pledged to Judge Brister, a strong delegation of active working Democrats on the outside would have great influence at Coshocton in bringing back the Congressional banner to Licking county. Take a day off, fellow Democrats, and citizens generally, and go to the convention and help Licking county to win.

The fare to Coshocton will only be $1.05 for the round trip, and the ride will only be a pleasant little outing. To secure this rate and to be on time at the convention you must be at the Pan Handle depot in time to start on the 8:25 Thursday morning train. Turn out, everyone, in the interest of Newark and Licking county.

The hard times are here, remarks the Cleveland Recorder. It is up to the Republicans to explain them. Will they declare that they are caused by "over production," or by "under consumption," or will they show that the patient foreigner has refused to pay our taxes. There has been a lot said about how necessary it is to have confidence. The workingmen have been told that the success of the Republican party is the only thing which can give confidence. It is up to the leaders of that party to tell the country why business men have lost confidence. For it is supposed that that must be the reason why men are being discharged by the tens of thousands.

Russia has discovered that her attitude toward the Jews has made her unpopular in other countries whose friendship she desired to have in her present stress, and also that it has seriously affected her ability to secure financial aid from the great Jewish bankers of the world. The issuing of the decree modifying the rigors of the Jewish residence law is the first official recognition of the fact that the Russian government is anxious to placate international sentiment aroused by reason of its barbarous attitude toward the chosen people.

The Philadelphia Record aptly remarks that the discharge of thousands of workingmen comes prematurely to put to good use by Republican pseudo-maniacs in the presidential campaign. A little later they might attribute it, as they did years ago, to the panic fears caused by the election of a Democratic President. Inasmuch as they want to use the same argument after next November's election it is just as well for the people to note now what is happening under the boasted prosperity rule of the Republican party.

President Baer's explanation of the high price of coal is that the people will pay it. The other side of that explanation is that the people will pay the price because they can't get the coal unless they do.

After all the circus is the most entertaining and instructive of all American shows. There is nothing else that approaches it in popularity with the children, and that's a good test.

It was noted with mingled awe and delight by the attentive English reporters that King Edward, on his recent visit to Ireland, wore his hat slightly "tilted to the right." All loyal hats will now be worn slightly tilted to the right.

There will be no vacation schools and no play centers for the children of New York this summer, it is said, on account of lack of funds.

NEWARK'S BANKS

Are All Sound and Stable Institutions, Whose Success Means Newark's Business Welfare.

Newark has every reason to be proud of her banks and proud of the confidence which her people have in the banks. Newark's bank troubles have been entirely too many, but through them all the people of this city acted admirably.

Today the banks of this city are stronger and safer than ever in its history. They are all in eminently competent hands and are carefully managed.

What we want to do now is for every one to pull together for Newark's welfare and business interests. Malicious reports attaching the stability of any institution can be easily circulated. Pay no attention to such idle talk.

Newark's welfare depends on Newark's banks. Both are in excellent shape. No city in Ohio can boast of stronger banks and better business men to guide them than this city.

Now that we are through with our bank troubles let us get together for Newark's business future.

MEMORIAL DAY

OBSERVED IN GRANVILLE BY OLD SOLDIERS.

Addresses By Gen. R. B Brown, of Zanesville, President Hunt and Others

Granville, O., May 31.—Memorial Day, that day ever dear and sacred to every old veteran and his family, and to ever patriotic citizen, has come and gone once more, and with it are revived the awful memories of one of the most gigantic struggles that ever convulsed the world. The civil war between the North and South has passed into history. Its dead are buried beneath the sod and the daisies of the North and South. Its wounds are largely healed, but its glorious results will live forever.

Memorial Day was fittingly observed in Granville on Monday by the survivors of the civil war, and the Spanish-American war. Evidences of the solemnity of the occasion were present on every hand, shown by the general quietude of the village, and the many flags draped in mourning.

Notwithstanding the steady down pour of rain in the morning there was much bustle in getting in readiness for the exercises of the afternoon.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the old soldiers and citizens assembled at the opera house, where a solemn and interesting program of exercises was carried out.

The large meeting was called to order by Rev. J. L. Wylie, who introduced the speakers of the afternoon in a few appropriate words, after which a quartet rendered a beautiful selection, which was followed by prayer of Rev. Mr. Carman.

General R. B. Brown of Zanesville, was the first speaker, and delivered a brilliant and patriotic address, which was listened to with the closest attention by the large audience present. His address was principally to the old soldiers. He described what they had accomplished and what the flag meant. His address was one of the finest ever delivered in Granville.

He was followed by Dr. Emery W. Hunt, president of Denison University, in a masterly address, which was meant for the young men present more than for anyone else, and which greatly pleased the old soldiers, and which was a lesson for the young as well.

Rev. Mr. Carman, also delivered a very interesting address to the children, in which he told them to take notice of the old soldiers and to remember them as the saviours of our country.

Dr. C. L. Work also made a short talk, which was very much appreciated.

Rev. Mr. Wylie read the obituaries of Joseph Kelvey, a veteran of the old Seventy-sixth O. V. I.; Plympton Hitt, who went out under the first call in the Seventeenth O. V. I.; Rev. Mr. Miller, who served four years in the Union army. At the time of the breaking out of the war Mr. Miller was in the South, but organized a squad of men and made their way North and joined the Union army. Rev. Mr. Miller served with it having been mustered into the service.

At the conclusion of the exercises the procession formed in the following order and marched to Maple Grove cemetery:

Speakers in Carriage.
Old Soldiers.
Children with Flowers.
Citizens

After decorating the graves of the dead heroes, who lie in Maple Grove cemetery, the procession wended its way to the old cemetery, where the same services was performed there. A squad of the old veterans also decorated the graves of the old soldiers who are sleeping in the Welsh Hills cemetery.

At the conclusion of the decoration ceremonies the old soldiers returned to the assembly room in the Town Hall, where the annual election of officers was held, which resulted as follows:

President—Thomas A. Jones.
Adjutant—Hiram LaFerre.
Treasurer—I. H. DeBow.
Flag Bearer for Life—John A. Weston.

At the conclusion of the business a social time was enjoyed for a short time by the old comrades, which was made doubly enjoyable by a short address by General R. B. Brown, in which he thoroughly explained the existing pension laws.

F. H. HALL GUARANTEES IT

To induce the people of Newark and neighboring towns to try this wonderful remedy he is making a special introductory offer of a regular fifty cent bottle, containing sixty doses, at half price, 25 cents. And with every bottle goes his guarantee to refund the money if the remedy does not cure.

Dr. Howard's specific is not a "cure-all."

But it is the only remedy you need if you suffer with constipation, indigestion, headaches or any disorder of the stomach and bowels. Mr. W. S. Green, a well known business man of Crown Point, N. Y., wrote the following letter very recently: "Nearly ten years ago I was a mere shadow, and according to the judgment of quite a number of doctors, my end was in sight. My troubles reduced my weight from 170 to 115 pounds. Finally an eminent physician prescribed Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia, and I soon improved. My weight went to about 150 pounds, and has stayed around there. Previous to taking the specific I had to live on rice and rye bread but now I eat anything and everything. I always take a dose after a heavy night meal, such as a banquet, and am all right in the morning.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.

Is Rivaled by Human Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Scouring the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." MADDEN

A COWARD AND BRUTE ASSAULTED HIS WIFE

And Cruelly Beat and Kicked Her into Insensibility—Two Charges Placed Against Him.

Mrs. Wm. Madden was frightfully beaten and abused by her husband, who is proprietor of the saloon formerly owned by Joseph Painter, South Park Place, about 7 o'clock Monday evening. The cause of the trouble is not known.

The two live on rooms in the third floor, over J. V. Hilliard's law office. Madden attacked his wife and she screamed. Woman rushed to their rooms, but found the doors locked. Chief of Police Sheridan and Officer McClure rushed up to the scene of the disturbance and broke one of the doors in.

Mrs. Madden was found on the floor, literally covered with blood. Her husband had knocked her down and had then brutally kicked her until she was almost unconscious. Her face was bruised and bleeding and the cruel kicks tore the scalp loose in several places.

Dr. H. D. Rank was called and he dressed the wounds. Several stitches were required to sew the scalp together.

Madden was arrested Tuesday morning his wife appeared at the police station and swore out a warrant charging him with assault with intent to kill. A charge of carrying concealed weapons was also preferred against him. He pleaded guilty to the latter charge and was fined $10 and the costs by Mayor Crilly.

The hearing on the former charge was continued until 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, and Madden was released, his bond being $500.

Frank A. Bolton is the attorney for Madden, and Attorney Phil Smythe represents the state.

TOUCHING INCIDENT

In Connection With Memorial Day Was Services at Grave of Veteran Fifer.

One of the touching incidents at the beautiful Cedar Hill cemetery yesterday during the ceremonies attending the decorating of the honored dead of the Civil war was that of the "old Newark Veteran Drum Corps" in a special service at the grave of David R. Jones, the veteran fifer of that organization. The corps formed a circle about the last resting place of their late comrade and reverently played "Davy's favorite, "The Sweet Bye and Bye," ending with cheers and mid fast falling tears strewed his grave with beautiful flowers. Mr. Jones was always identified with such ceremonies and was known to the majority of our citizens.

JUDGE E. M. P. BRISTER

Licking County's Nominee for Congress.

Judge E. M. P. Brister is a great-grandson of Gen. Rufus Putnam, of the Revolutionary war, who settled the State of Ohio at Marietta, April 7, 1788, his mother being a granddaughter of General Putnam.

Judge Brister was born in Cadiz, Harrison county, Ohio, June 26, 1850. His father, M. P. Brister, Esq., who was a well known and talented journalist, came with his family to Newark in 1852, and died in 1856, leaving the subject of this sketch fatherless at the age of six years.

By the death of his father, young Brister was compelled, when a boy, to supplement his mother's heroic exertions to maintain herself and child, Mrs. C. P. Brister conducting her husband's newspaper with great ability for three years.

"Put" Brister, as he was generally called, began his life's labor when only eight years old, as a newsboy. When fourteen years old, young Brister entered the office of the "Licking Recorder" to learn the printing trade When seventeen years old, he, with L. F. Tenney, Esq., started a job printing office, which the two carried on for three years.

But Mr. Brister had long cherished the resolution of obtaining a classical education; and in 1870 he bought Mr. Tenney's interest in the little printing office and removed it to Granville, the seat of Denison University.

Here he entered upon the arduous undertaking of working his way through a six years' college course, at the same time supporting himself and his invalid mother.

He did his studying at night and morning, studying until eleven o'clock at night and getting up to study at four o'clock in the morning. In this way he completed the six years' classical course, graduating from Denison University with high honors in 1877. Part of his course he took in Wooster University, Wayne county, Ohio, where he also moved his printing office.

In the spring of 1878, Mr. Brister began to read law, and was admitted to the bar in 1880.

Judge Brister is a life-long Democrat, and has been a hard and faithful party worker all his life. Some twenty-five years ago, he began making campaign speeches for the Democratic party, since which time his services, both as a campaign and public speaker, have been in constant demand, both in this county and throughout the State. He has also done good service on campaign clubs and committees, and has always been liberal with his time and such means as he had, whenever the party needed them.

Licking county makes a strong claim to the Congressional nomination, this time, by rotation. The present district, the 17th, was formed in 1892, by adding Wayne and Holmes counties, to the old 14th District,—then composed of Coshocton, Licking, Muskingum and Tuscarawas— and dropping Muskingum out.

So, the present 17th District is composed of the five counties, viz: Coshocton, Holmes, Licking, Tuscarawas and Wayne. In the present district, three counties, viz: Tuscarawas, Holmes, and Coshocton have had the Congressman, in the order named.

Licking has not had the Congressman, in the present District.

Our last Congressman was Capt. J. W. Owens, nominated in 1888, in another District, the old 16th, composed of Coshocton, Holmes, Licking, Muskingum and Tuscarawas.

Wayne has not had the Congressman in this District either; but, Wayne came into the District after Licking did Licking should be entitled to the nomination first, by rotation. It is Licking's turn now.

MISS FREMONT, GRANDDAUGHTER OF "THE PATHFINDER."

Miss Juliette Van Wyck Fremont, granddaughter of General John C. Fremont, is a patriotic American despite the fact that she has lived abroad since she was a little girl. Her mother was Miss Sallie Henderson, a noted southern beauty. Miss Fremont was educated in Europe and is a very cultured and accomplished young woman.

INCENDIARY

ATTEMPT TO BURN B. & O FREIGHT DEPOT.

Night Clerk Discovered Waste Saturated With Oil Piled Under Door and Burning Fiercely.

A bold attempt by an incendiary was made to burn the Baltimore & Ohio freight depot, on South First street. About 1:30 o'clock as Night Clerk Cody was making the rounds of the building he discovered a lot of waste, saturated with oil, piled up and under the east doors of the building on the north side, and burning fiercely. He immediately turned in an alarm to which the central fire department quickly responded, and the fire was extinguished with the aid of the chemical. On investigation it was found that a large hole had been burned through the door, and had not the fire been discovered when it was the probability is that there would have been a disastrous fire. Further investigation developed the fact that an attempt had been made to start a fire under the middle door on the north side of the building, as a large quantity of waste, also saturated with oil, was found piled against and under the door. Mr. H. M. Gratham, the agent, says he is pretty well satisfied as to the identity of the incendiary, and the probability is that an arrest will be made.

FOR THE PEOPLE

An Answer to a Question That Is Asked Every Day.

To the many inquiries that have written and to the thousands who would like information on the same subject, we wish to state that it is impossible to build up in a day what has been years breaking down, and while one bottle of Father John's Medicine will give relief in most long-standing cases of bronchitis, asthma and consumption, a system run down by these and other ailments, such as scrofula, anaemia (thin blood), and rheumatism, needs the nourishment of this old prescription every day for a considerable time in order to restore full health and strength. Not a patent medicine and free from alcohol or other weakening stimulants, upon which the majority of patent medicines depend for their effect and which are dangerous.

FOLK SONGS

Will Be Sung By Mr Walter Bentley Ball at Recital on June 2

"Ye who love a nation's legends,
Love the ballads of a people."

are cordially invited to the folk song recital to be given under the auspices of Pan-Racial Chapter No. 1, by Mr. Walter Bentley Ball, Thursday evening, June 2, at the Second Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock. Admission will be free, but a collection to defray expenses incurred by the chapter will be taken.

As before announced, a part of the program will consist of Zuni Indian songs. This tribe is an interesting people, numbering about 2,000 souls, living in Zuni, a town covering an area of about one-half square mile in the state of New Mexico. The houses are made of sun-dried brick, and are, some of them, three and four stories high, ladders extending to the roof being used as means of entrance. The Zunis are a semi-civilized, hospitable and industrious people, receiving but little aid from the Federal Government. They have a high priest, who is both the temporal and spiritual ruler of the tribe. Mr. Frank H. Cushing of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, has been adopted into this tribe and has dwelt with them for some years, for the purpose of securing their melodies and customs.

Other Indian songs will be sung by Mr. Ball Thursday night. Also a number of typical negro melodies, some of which have never been available until recently transcribed by H. T. Burleigh.

Those who were fortunate enough to hear Mr. Ball in his first folk song recital, May 26th, at the Baptist church, are loud in their praise of his superb rendition of a program consisting of songs of the British Isles It can be confidently announced that Thursday evening's program will be no less interesting.

He Wasn't Thirsty

[Original.]

"Grass!"

The word was shouted from a dozen voices, the occasion being the entry of a tenderfoot into a dance room near a railroad station in the wild west. He was a delicate looking little fellow about five feet six inches high, with thin flesh on, rather, no fat on his bones, and as he heard the salutation and saw the revelers' eyes all leveled at him he looked somewhat embarrassed.

There was no tougher place in the territory than the scene of this fandango. The women present were by no means out of place with the men, whose costume was sombrero, woolen shirt and trousers tucked in boots. To every man's hips were two big revolvers, which, in keeping with the brim of his hat, flopped up and down as he danced. Since there were far more men than women, a dozen of the former were sitting around the walls of the dance house, and it was these who saluted the stranger.

"Show us the last city dance!"

"His feet's purty enough fur a gal!"

"Look at the taper waist of him!"

Though the position was embarrassing for the tenderfoot, he was good natured and laughed at the jokes cracked at his expense.

"Come, Sissie; have a drink."

The last speaker put his arm through that of the stranger and began to force him toward the bar.

"I'm not drinking just now," said the unwilling man.

"Not drinking! Well, who ever heard the like of that? D'you reckon you're too fine to drink with this crowd?"

"No, I drink usually, but just now it wouldn't do for me to drink till after the middle of next month."

By this time there was a lineup. The men were jostling the little tenderfoot, shoving him up against the bar. The glasses were filled.

"See here, Sissie," said the man who had invited him, "you drinks, and you drinks right here now, the only question being whether you drinks lead or whisky. Which shall it be?"

The little stranger began to change in his exterior. A resolute look came over his face, very different from the good natured smile with which he had received the jokes at his expense.

"My friends," he said, "if it's drink or fight, "I'll fight—that is, if you'll give me a chance. You see, I'm unarmed, and if I had a dozen revolvers I wouldn't know how to use 'em. The only way for me to fight out of this is with my fists."

"Bully boy! Form a ring! Clear the hall!"

The crowd pushed into the center of the dance room, shoving the dancers back. Then began a clamor as to who should have the honor of making mince meat of the tenderfoot. The man whose invitation to drink had been ignored maintained his right, and the others deferred to him. So he unstrapped his belt with its twin revolvers, tossed them in a corner, then sent his hat sailing after them. The tenderfoot took off every stitch of clothing above the waist, and the group were somewhat surprised to see that whatever flesh there was on him was pure muscle. His antagonist, six feet high and heavy in proportion, lumbered up to him, intending to give him one blow that would settle him. He gave the blow, but the tenderfoot was not where it was intended to land. Before the tough could steady himself on his legs after his great effort the tenderfoot's fist took him under the jaw and lifted him off his feet. There was a quick shower of blows, and the tough was relegated to the corner, his head finding a pillow on his sombrero.

There was some surprise manifested. Indeed, when the strongest man present stepped into the ring no one attempted to prevent his finishing the job at which his predecessor had failed. Just as he was about to land a blow on the tenderfoot's forehead that spry little man ducked, got him by the pins, and he went down on his head so hard that he couldn't get up.

One more of the toughs tried his hand with no better success than the others. By this time it was evident that the tenderfoot was a boxer of the first order. There was some hesitation about continuing the contest.

"Step up, gents," said the victor. "I'm anxious to prove to you that I'm not thirsty."

But the crowd had had enough of that kind of fighting, and as the stranger had won at the game they had consented to play with him there seemed nothing else to do but to let him alone.

"That's all right," said one of the toughs. "In these parts when a man isn't thirsty and has the stuff in him to prove he isn't thirsty he does as he likes. Whar did you l'arn them tricks with yer fists, little un?"

"I'm the champion featherweight of the world. There's a chap in Frisco, the champion featherweight of America. He's challenged me. I'm on my way there now. I'd have been proud to drink with you, gents, but I'm in training. Any drink I'd take would cost me $1,000, besides not being right to my backers. Good evenin', gents. I hear the whistle blowing, and I reckon the train's concluded to go on. Much obliged for the opportunity of a little practice. Come over to Frisco and see the match."

"Gents," said the man who had called for the information, "never before has these parts been honored by the presence of a champion. Fall into line, and we'll escort the gent to the train."

The crowd, including those who had been knocked out, marched him to the station and as the train moved off gave him three lusty cheers.

The morning sun lay warm and clear after the rain of the night before, and young Atherley as his horse loped easily along the wide range sang aloud for very joy of light heartedness. Out here, away from cities and crowds, how good life was!

Far across the plain he could see the smoke of the nearing eastbound train, and the pony, also taking life placidly, received a gentle kick as hint for speed. Atherley was anxious to get his letter off. A few moments later he galloped up to the lonely station and, dismounting, flung the reins to the ground.

The train was in, and Atherley hurried around the corner, then halted suddenly, dazzled by the vision which confronted him. On the lower steps of a car near the middle of the train stood a girl, her fair hair blowing in the wind, her hands full of pink roses, her eyes gazing straight into his. For a second neither moved. Then, as a voice from within called "Marion," the girl, with a quick flush, turned up the steps, and Atherley, stricken with the consciousness of his dusty "chaps," huge spurs and sombrero, slipped back. He had quite forgotten his letter. The engine gave a preliminary snort, the conductor yelled, "All aboard!" but

ATHERLEY HALTED SUDDENLY, DAZZLED BY THE VISION WHICH CONFRONTED HIM.

Atherley still stood motionless, his eyes fixed on the car wherein she had disappeared. As the slow length of train began to move the girl slipped back to the platform for a moment, and on the ground, almost at Atherly's feet, fell a pink rose. To spring forward, seize the flower, then swing aboard the last car as it passed was to Atherley but the work of another moment. Before he had fairly realized it he was on the train and speeding eastward as fast as steam could carry him.

Practical thoughts forced a way, and his first act was to take account of stock.

"Jim will take the horse back," he reasoned. "It's all right. Luckily I have just about enough for my ticket to New York." Somehow he had decided that she lived in New York. "And as for meals—well, who knows what may turn up," with cheerful optimism.

At the next stop he sneaked forward to the smoking car and sat down to think things over. She was certainly a mighty pretty girl. Atherley, feeling for the rose hidden in his breast pocket, concluded that he would probably not regret his action.

"But I've got to get busy on the food question."

There were three or four other men in the car, the younger ones chatting together and another, rather older, reading in a corner. All eyed him curiously, and Atherley had an inspiration. If he worked them right, amused them, told them queer experiences, they might supply him with food, and as for cigars—well, he must husband those he had carefully. In pursuance of this idea he moved nearer, and one of the men looked up.

"Going east for your first trip?" he queried casually. Atherley laughed.

"Are my clothes so very unsuitable, then?" looking down at them doubtfully. The man laughed also.

"Well, they look as if you had started in a bit of a hurry," he remarked, and Atherley nodded.

"So I did," he remarked confidentially. One of the other men yawned.

"This trip is deadly dull. Tell us about it," he suggested. Atherley, nothing loath, plunged into a farrango of nonsense and soon had them all laughing. Even the older man in the corner looked interested, and when one by one the others drifted away he came over and seated himself by Atherley. The young fellow was to him quite a new type, and the man's amusement deepened as he listened to Atherley's half boyish chatter. It was a long time since he had met any one so spontaneous and frank. And the lad, wherever he had picked it up, was evidently a gentleman.

"So you really just jumped on the train and came," he asked at length, "and for no other reason than that you wanted to see the world?" Atherley laughed rather shamefacedly.

"That's what I told those fellows. But I don't mind telling you the truth. It was—it was on account of a girl," he said haltingly. The older man's lips twitched.

"A girl! How so?"

"I saw her on the car steps," confessed Atherley. "And—and I liked her," he ended lamely, not even to himself did he care to mention the rose. "I wonder if you have seen her?" he added eagerly. "She had on some kind of a blue skirt with a white waist and carried some roses. They called her 'Marion.'"

The older man started.

"Marion," he exclaimed. "Why, that's my daughter!" unthinkingly. Then he stopped, rather annoyed. A young ranchman, no matter how charming and gentlemanly, was hardly a person to be presented to the carefully guarded Marion. But Atherley was too absorbed to notice the hesitation.

"Your daughter!" he cried. "Really your daughter? Oh, I say what luck! That will save me an awful lot of time and trouble. I expected the deuce of a job in locating her. Though I knew that I should do it in the end," he added confidently. "Do you mind telling me your name?"

"My name," divided between indignation and mirth. "I am James Arbuthnot," he declared rather pompously. But Atherley was clearly unimpressed.

"Better and better," he cried. "I always was a lucky devil," joyously. The older man leaned back and stared at him.

"My dear young man," began he in his most formal manner, "I think we must misunderstand each other. I certainly fail to see where the luck comes in." Atherley, staring in his turn, became suddenly enlightened.

"Of course you mean that you don't know me," he cried. "Oh, that's all right," easily. "I've heard dad speak of you hundreds of times. I'm Billy Atherley, and I've just been out looking up some properties in the west."

The older man's brow cleared somehow.

"Not William H. Atherley's son?"

Atherley nodded.

"The same. So now won't you introduce me to your daughter?" wistfully. "It would save such a lot of time."

Arbuthnot, his gray eyes twinkling, looked at the young fellow quizzically.

"If you are much like your father, and I think you are, you would be hardly apt to wait long for my services," he remarked jocosely. "Come along, then. All I ask of you is please not to get married before we reach New York." The tone strove to be stern, but young Atherley laughed happily.

"I make no promises," he declared, with gay defiance. "Oh, here; hold on a moment," as a sudden recollection of his unmailed letter recurred to him. Pulling out the envelope, he tore it into fragments, letting the pieces float out of the open window.

"It was to say that I wasn't coming home," he explained. "I will telegraph from Chicago. Now, if you are ready."

The Pilot's Authority.

The first thing a sailor will tell you who has been to the Rio Plata, in South America, is about the pilots there.

He does not like them. Most of the river pilots are ignorant negro fishermen, who have been to sea on English ships and therefore know the language. In blue and brass uniforms, backed by government authority, they make themselves almost unbearable at times. But by the law they are in command while the ship is in the river, and they may order even the captain to do their bidding.

A large British bark was being towed up the river one day. The black pilot had been strutting about the deck some time, when he suddenly bawled out:

"Square in dem foreyards!"

Surprised and disgusted, the sailors obeyed.

"Now brace up de mainyards, ye lubbers!" he bawled next.

The captain was angry.

"Pilot," he protested in a choking voice, "what do you mean by bracing about yards with sails furled and a calm day?"

"Dat's all right, cap'n," responded the pilot with a majestic wave of his hand. "I's got ter show my authority in some way. Go 'way; don't say nuffin to me."

A Dangerous Jest.

"I don't think," said the young man, "that I ever want to be engaged again."

And the young woman flared up immediately and said:

"Very well, sir. You may consider everything over. I will return you your letters and photographs and presents right now."

"But I don't believe you understand me."

"Yes, I do; perfectly. You said you never wanted to be engaged again."

"But do you know why?"

"No, and I don't care."

"It's because I want to marry the girl I am engaged to now."

And the world became beautiful once more.

A Bargain.

A woman who does her own shopping "for the house" went into a local drug store to buy soap. It was 8 cents per cake. She looked it over carefully and asked the surprised clerk:

"Do you give three cakes for a quarter?"

After he had recovered from his daze he replied:

"We do not, as a rule, madam, but we will let you have them at that price."

She bore them away in triumph, and not until the shouts of joy from the rest of the house arose as she told of her bargain did the awful fact dawn upon her consciousness.—Minneapolis Journal.

[Original.]

I was at my bank to make my weekly deposit. Coming out I saw an old gentleman with a long pocketbook in his hands, running over a thick batch of bills. So far as I could see they were $100 bills, and judging from the thickness of the pile there must have been twenty or thirty of them. I left the bank and stood on the sidewalk waiting for a trolley car. Just as one came along the old gentleman came up and got into it, I taking a seat on the side opposite him. He was a restless little man, frequently changing his position, and during the ride he took the pocketbook I had seen him handling at the bank from a side pocket and stuffed it into his coat tail pocket. This he doubtless did from nervousness, for his tail pocket was not as safe a place for his treasure as the side pocket, and in transferring it he displayed it to the passengers.

Presently he signaled the conductor, who stopped the car at the next corner, and the old gentleman got out. The car had not gone on farther than a block before I noticed the pocketbook lying on the seat he had left. I sprang for it, rushed to the door and, without waiting for the car to stop, jumped off.

Running back a block, I came to a trolley line crossing. A car had stopped and was just moving on when I came up. On its rear platform stood the man I was looking for. By the time I reached the corner the car was moving so rapidly that I was doubtful of my ability to catch it. Another was coming, and jumping on its front platform I kept my eye fixed on the one in front. The old gentleman soon went inside, but I watched every one who got off, making sure that he was not among them. He did not leave the car till he had gone several miles into the country—in fact, to the terminus of the trolley road. When he did so, my car was so far behind that I could barely see him get into a carriage and drive away. On reaching the terminus I described him to a cabman, who knew him, had seen him come in and drive away, and he agreed for $2 to take me to the gentleman's place, a mile distant. I was driven there and in between two splendid pillars that formed the gateway to a magnificent country seat.

Meanwhile I had run over the contents of the pocketbook and found it contained $2,500. I concluded, for safety, to divide the amount between my various pockets, and there being no one on the platform except the motorman I was not observed in doing so. Before getting out of the cab I retransferred the amounts to the pocketbook.

Now, I am not a person to accept a reward for returning found property, but I wondered what the old man would do to compensate me for my trouble. That is, how would he contrive to induce a gentleman, who could not be rewarded as one in the ordinary walks of life, to accept some token of his appreciation. I found him having just missed his treasure and in great distress. When I produced his pocketbook he seized it eagerly, danced about, cried a little, then remembering me asked me to be seated. As I had left a matter of importance to follow him and was eager to get back to it I declined and was taking my leave when he thrust his hand into his vest pocket, took out a two dollar bill and handed it to me.

"I see," I said, "for the cabman. You are right. It would be an ungracious act for me not to permit you to bear any expense attending the return of your property."

I turned and, jumping into the cab, rode away.

I had been so incensed at being offered $2 as a reward for so much trouble that I left without asking the owner to count his money. He in turn was so excited that he had forgotten to do so. Instinctively I ran my hands through my pockets to see that I had replaced all the money and in my right hip pocket found five $100 bills. I directed the driver to return, but he had no sooned started to do so than I changed my mind. The old man should pay some one for my trouble.

A friend of mine—a lady—is very much interested in a day nursery. I told her the circumstances of my find, gave her the $500 to return to the old gentleman, suggesting that she ask him for a donation. She cheerfully acquiesced, took the money and getting into her carriage drove to the owner's residence. Gaining an interview she presented the cause of her nursery and asked for a contribution.

"Contribution, madam!" he exclaimed. "I'm impoverished. Only yesterday I lost $500." And he told her of his experience with his pocketbook. She asked him to describe the man who had returned it, and he did so.

"What will you give my nursery," she asked, "if I secure the return of your $500?"

"Anything you ask."

"Half?"

"Great heavens! Half! Would you take it all?"

"Well, I doubt if I can serve you," she said and got up to leave. But the old fellow suspected she knew more than she would admit and would not let her go. He finally promised to donate half the amount if he could secure the rest, but the lady assured him she had been only joking and would not extort money even for charity. At last he subscribed and paid $100 as a voluntary contribution, and the lady left him without any reference to his missing treasure. After keeping him in suspense for awhile I returned his $500. An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Foxy Eel

"Good gracious!" cried Conger Eel, slipping quickly to one side as a most wonderful creature came sliding toward him. "What in the name of Neptune is this?"

"Fore!" yelled the creature, dashing past him.

"What for?" gasped Conger, wiggling his whiskers.

"Ho, ho!" laughed the other. "Don't know me, do you? Oh, I'm 'bogy' at the course."

"DON'T SEE IT MYSELF."

"Should say you were a bogy. What do you want to scare a fellow like that for, and wha. have you been doing?"

"Oh, I'm just practicing for the summer. You see, there is a golf course on the edge of this pond, and I have learned the game from hearing it so often, and, you see, it's so much cooler down here to play than in that hot field, and then they knock so many balls in the pond that I am well supplied. Now, if you will just be caddie I'll go on with the game."

"What is the game?"

"Oh, just put the ball on a lily pad and pound it with this club and yell 'Fore!' and if you find it before next week you win the game."

"Oh, I see," said the eel. "And if you don't find it the other fellow wins. I'll caddie for you. All ready."

Mr. Perch put the ball on a lily pad and gave it a good rap. Mr. Eel opened his mouth wide and caught the ball.

"Can you find it?" said he.

Mr. Perch looked in vain. "I can't seem to locate it," he said hopelessly.

"Don't see it myself," said the eel, with a smile.

"I guess it went out of bounds," suggested the perch.

"I think it's inside, though," smiled the eel. "Do you give it up?"

"I do," said Mr. Perch sadly.

"So do I," said the eel, coughing it out of his mouth, "and I guess I win."

Moral.—You can be cheated at any game, even golf.—Detroit Journal.

Danger That Lurks In a Rabbit.

A correspondent of the Washington Post tells of a rabbit which killed a hound with one blow of its claws. A rabbit is more dangerous than is really thought. Last winter on Pocosin creek Mr. John Hobbs while hunting rabbits had his dog run one into a hollow log. As he stooped to peep into the log the rabbit leaped out full against Mr. Hobbs, breaking his nose and knocking him upon his dog with such force as to crush that animal to death. The rabbit escaped. We don't know as to the truth of the story in the Washington Post, but Mr. Hobbs is a living but disfigured witness of the tragedy on Pocosin creek. — Princeton (W. Va.) Journal.

Early Women Journalists.

Mrs. Ebenezer Watson of Hartford, Conn., who back in 1777 and 1778 was proprietor and editor of the Courant, has been claimed as the earliest woman journalist of the country. But now comes the Charleston News and Courier with a chronicle of the fact that as far back as 1738 a Mrs. Timothy of that town on the death of her husband continued the publication and editorial management of the South Carolina Gazette.

A Snub For Nordenskjold.

Great indignation is expressed in Sweden at the shabby treatment meted out to Otto Nordenskjold, the south pole explorer, by the authorities of the Stockholm university. Nordenskjold had applied for the vacant chair of geography, and not only was his application refused, but the reasons given for this were offensive. "The candidature of Nordenskjold," said the university authorities, "has to be rejected principally because the scientific qualifications of the applicant cannot be ascertained with sufficient exactness." Nordenskjold before starting on his expedition was a lecturer at the university.

WIRE ROPE FROM POMPEII.

Rope Tramways Were In Use Two Hundred and Sixty Years Ago.

It is not an uncommon thing in this age of advancement in industrial and engineering matters for the present day engineer to assume that he knows much more than his ancient brother, and while this is true in many things it frequently happens that an invention or appliance commonly believed to belong to modern times is found to have been known and used centuries ago.

Ropes made of various kinds of fiber and leather are of very ancient date. Ropes of palm have been found in Egypt in the tombs of Beni Hassan (about 3000 B. C.), and on the walls of these tombs is also shown the process of preparing hemp. In a tomb at Thebes of the time of Thotmes III. (about 1600 B. C.) is a group representing the process of twisting thongs of leather and the method of cutting leather into thongs. The Bible tells us that Samson was bound with ropes and that the spies sent by Joshua into Jericho were let down in a basket, presumably by means of a rope.

At Nimrud, Assyria, a carved slab showing the siege of a castle was found, on which a soldier was represented in the act of cutting a rope to which a bucket for drawing water from a well outside the castle walls was attached.

The wire rope is generally considered a modern invention, a product of modern skill, and it will surprise many to learn that its manufacture is really a rediscovered lost art.

Although the Assyrians practiced the art of wire beating, no evidence has been found to indicate that they used wire for making rope.

The excavations at Pompeii have, however, brought to light a piece of bronze wire rope nearly fifteen feet long and about one inch in circumference. This rope is now in the Museo Borbonico at Naples. It consists of three strands laid spirally together, each strand being made up of fifteen wires twisted together, and its construction does not therefore differ greatly from that of wire ropes made today. Pompeii was buried A. D. 79, 1,825 years ago, but how long wire ropes had been known it is impossible to tell, though, judging by the knowledge shown in the construction, it may be safely concluded that they had been known for a considerable time. The uses to which these ropes were put are not definitely known, but further excavations may shed some light on the subject.

As to the use of rope tramways, it is said that they were in use as early as 1644.—Philadelphia Record.

In the Palm Room.

PILGRIMS AT LASSA.

One of the Strange Customs of Priest Ridden Tibet.

Three or four years ago the British were busy with their troubles in South Africa, and Russia took the opportunity to extend her influence over feeble states like Afghanistan and Tibet, on the northern frontier of the British Indian empire. Now that Russia is busy with Japan it is Great Britain's turn. The expedition of Colonel Younghusband, who has pierced the Himalayas and reached the almost inaccessible plateau known as Tibet, has directed attention to its customs.

The strangest of these customs are those of the Buddhist pilgrims to the sacred city of Lassa, the capital of Tibet. Among the feats a pilgrim performs is that of measuring his length around the entire circuit of Lassa. He walks five feet and then falls to the ground. He rises again, walks five feet and then repeats the process, continuing it all the way around the city, a distance of thirteen miles.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

Big Battleship Versus Torpedo Boat and Contact Mine.

authorities on the subject agree that no country which wishes to be a naval power can afford to be without them.

The comparison between the battleship and the contact mine in the matter of size seems like a case of David and Goliath. The contact mine is a comparatively simple and inexpensive affair, but sometimes, as in the cases of the Russian Petropavlovsk and the Japanese Hatsuse, it serves to render vain a great expenditure.

POWER IN FISH RATION

Secret of Wonderful Mobility of Japanese Army.

LIVE LONG ON A LITTLE FOOD.

Soldiers Carry Dried Finny Specimens, Each of Which Lasts a Man One Week—How the Fish Is Prepared—Independence of Troops on the March.

General John F. Weston, chief of subsistence of the American army, has solved what he believes to be the great secret of the wonderful mobility of the Japanese army, says a Washington special to the Chicago Record-Herald. It lies in the field ration, a sample of which he has received from Major W. B. Barker at Nagasaki, one of the American officers who are watching the war. The ration shows that the Japanese soldier can live and fight for a month on a food supply that weighs less than the daily ration of the American soldier in the field.

The fish received by General Weston is about seven inches long and an inch and a half thick in the middle, dried until it resembles petrified wood. It weighs only twelve ounces, but Major Barker says it will sustain a Japanese soldier for seven days.

When soldiers are on the march they eat the fish just as it is, biting off small pieces, which are thoroughly masticated, but when they are in camp the fish is shaved off in small slices and cooked with rice. The fish resembles a mackerel, but its Japanese name is "mamibushi." The fish is about two feet long and thick and solid before preparation for the army ration. In preparing it for army use it is cut in two and steamed and dried alternately until it is reduced to about one-eighth of its original size, with a corresponding reduction in weight.

Each Japanese soldier can carry enough fish and rice to last him three or four weeks, and a whole army can be made independent of the commissary trains that are indispensable in other armies.

Dried fish is used only as a ration. The regular daily ration in the Japanese army consists of one and a half pounds of rice and half a pound of canned meat. The daily ration in the United States army weighs about four pounds, and the emergency ration is not a great deal lighter.

WAR SOUVENIRS.

Japanese Humor as Depicted In Cartoons.

H. Varigari, the New York representative of a big commercial house of Tokyo, recently received a funny collection of war souvenirs from the Japanese capital, says the New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. They are bits of cloth designed for use as table covers, napkins, etc., and each one is decorated with a cartoon showing some feature of the war. That the Japanese humor is quite as incisive of that of their Yankee brethren is shown by these cartoons. One of them shows the bottom of the ocean scattered with the wrecks of Russian battleships. The fish are all sick, and the doctor has just discovered the cause of their ailment. They have been swallowing Russian flags.

Mr. Varigari says the people buy these things by the dozen and decorate their homes with them just as we tack up the funny supplements of the newspapers when they happen to appeal to our sense of humor. He says the Japanese housewife delights in going about the shops picking up these little things just to have a joke with her husband at breakfast.

Blind Men In Revolt.

Five hundred and fifty inmates of the Blind Hospital of St. Joseph at Naples broke out in revolt recently because the management had published a regulation limiting the hours of outdoor exercise, says the Rome correspondent of the London Chronicle. A blind old man was posted in the Campanile to ring the signal bell for the outbreak, whereupon the malcontents swarmed through the windows. To prevent communication with the police they had barred the entrances and destroyed the telephone apparatus. They also tore up the gaspipes. One of the directors, who sought to summon aid, was forced to leap from the balcony on the second floor to escape the fury of the rebels. Some of the rioters were badly cut and bruised.

War of Lovers on Mosquitoes.

Driven to desperation by the prospect of an unusual crop of mosquitoes, the Leap Year Girls' club of Beverly, Mass., has taken the initiative in open warfare on that pest, says a Boston special to the New York Times. The most prolific breeding spots, two ponds, are to be treated to a coat of coal oil. These places are ideal spots for moonlight strolls. Last summer "Lovers' lane" was developing a breed of mosquitoes which made Beverly a close rival for all the honors bestowed on New Jersey. All this will be stopped this year. At least that is what the Leap Year Girls' club says.

If June Were Mine.

If June were mine, I'd weave for you—
Of poets and of skies of blue,
Of golden sun and orchard shoon,
Of blossom-frosted mamaseene—
A veil of every petal hue.

And from the morning mists of dew
Distill a fairy stream that through
The woods should wend a way serene,
If June were mine.

And o'er the purple dusk anew
The curtains of the sunset drew
Adown the river's dream demesne
I'd paint a patch incarnadine
And drift into the dawn with you,
If June were mine.

His Mistake.

He—She doesn't like me. I attempted to kiss her once.

She—How foolish of you! Why didn't you attempt to kiss her twice?

George and Rose.

George is a sturdy farmer boy who lives in the grand old state of Iowa. One accomplishment that George has is the ability to judge horseflesh. This gift he has developed at the expense of his writing and spelling and grammar. Until a few days ago there wasn't an eighteen-year-old boy within a radius of seventeen miles of Keosauqua who had as fine a horse and buggy as George owned and operated, mostly for the benefit of a certain Miss Rose, whose other name needn't be mentioned, inasmuch as it is likely to be changed some day anyway. But it befell that George had to move away from Keosauqua to a distant part of the state, and Rose, desiring to let him down easy, wrote to him the following proper little letter:

Friend George—I wish to have you remember that you have been good to me and one of the best of my boy friends. I have been proud of Gyp and your buggy, and I shall miss them. And as you are taking them so far away I thought it right to thank you for the many, many pleasant rides and your kindness, and also to say that you are going so far away that I will not expect to ever see or hear from you any more. Again thanking you for the pleasure you have given me in many ways, I bid you goodby and hope you will soon find another girl who loves Gyp. Your friend, ROSE.

To which George promptly replied:

Mi deer rôze. I got yure letter and I hate tew go off. I am glad you like gip, case she iz how I got soch good times. I thank her and you tew fer them hugs and kisses and set on mi lap, yorne, GEO.

Noble George, to thus recognize the debt he owes to Gyp instead of egotistically ascribing to his own charms of person and manner the willingness of the fair one to sit on his lap and yield up the hugs and kisses that must have made Keosauqua and the surrounding country Elysium. To what heights of bliss might he have risen had he possessed an automobile! —Chicago Record-Herald.

Straight Tip.

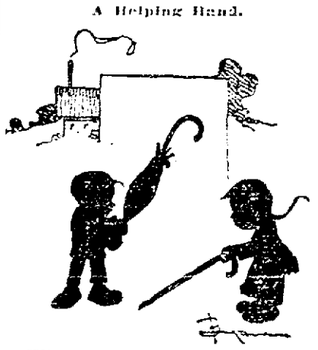

"Have you ever studied political economy?" asked the long haired passenger as he laid down his newspaper and turned toward the portly individual across the aisle.

"That's what I have," replied the portly man, with an audible sigh. "I studied it from the beginning to the end of one campaign."

"And what is the result of your investigation?" asked the other.

"I was defeated for alderman in my ward," was the reply, "and I am firmly convinced that the best political economy is to stay out of politics."—Chicago Journal.

A Helping Hand.

"What are you standing there for? Don't you see I'm going to hit the ball?"

"You've missed it so often I thought I'd show you where it is."—New York Evening Journal.

What She Said.

"George, dear," she said, with a blush, "do you know that Mr. Simpson asked me last night to be his wife?"

"Well, I like his impudence. The idea of proposing to an engaged young lady! What did you say to him?"

"I told him that I was very sorry, indeed, but he was too late."

HUMOR

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY.

How the News of Reginald's Mishap Affected His Mother.

"Mrs. Gottwedds," said the gentleman as he took a seat in the luxurious drawing room, "I—that is—please don't let yourself be unduly alarmed, but I have come to break some sad news to you."

"Oh, heavens!" she cried, throwing up her hands and casting at him an agonized look. "It is my boy! Something has happened to Reginald! Speak! Tell me that he is not—dead!"

"No, he is not dead. Calm yourself. I must insist that you try to control your nerves. You see"—

"But he is hurt! He went away in his automobile an hour ago. Something has happened. Tell me—tell me! I cannot bear this terrible strain. My poor boy! Tell me that he will get well! Have pity! Have pity on me!"

"Oh, he isn't hurt at all. He's just as sound in body and limb as I am. The truth is"—

"But I thought you said it was going to be something terrible? Ah, you are deceiving me! You are keeping back the truth! I must know all! Don't torture me this way. You are cruel. Let me know the worst. I will be brave. I will try to bear up. Oh, my boy! My poor boy! Take me to him! Where is he?"

"You see, he was going faster than the law allowed and ran over an old lady. They've arrested him for manslaughter and insist on holding him under a heavy bond, so that"—

"Oh, is that all? I'm so relieved. Really, the way you spoke I couldn't help thinking it was something serious."—Chicago Record-Herald.

California Dog Painter.

"Yes, sir. For instance, there's a mammoth winter storm landscape I've just finished for Mr. Mudd, the bonanza king. It's called 'A Hailstorm in the Adirondacks,' and a visitor who sat down near it the other day caught a sore throat in less than fifteen minutes. The illusion is so perfect, you understand. Why, I had to put in the finishing touches with my ulster and arctic overshoes on."

"Don't say?"

"Fact, sir. And then there's a little animal gem I did for Governor Glerkins the other day—portrait of his Scotch terrier Snap. The morning it was done a cat got into the studio, and the minute it saw the picture it went through the window like a ten inch shell."

"Did, eh?"

"Yes, and the oddest thing about it was that when I next looked at the canvas the dog's hair was standing up all along his back like a porcupine. Now, how do you account for that?"

"Dunno."

"It just beats me. When the governor examined the work he insisted on my painting in a post with the dog chained to it. Said he didn't know what might happen."—San Francisco Post.

Kinky English.

In the window of a New York clothing house is the following sign:

"Don't it jar you to see this hand tailored worsted suits selling at $10 when you have paid $12 and $15 for goods of same quality?"

"I can stand the shock of being informed that I have been swindled," said a man who looked at the sign, "but it certainly does jar me to see such bad grammar so conspicuously displayed."—New York Press.

Pure Fiction.

Bill—You've often heard about a girl screaming when a man went to kiss her?

Jill—Yes.

"Well, honest, now; did you ever hear a girl scream in your life when a man did kiss her?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Considerate.

A mother found her small daughter shut in a closet. "What are you doing in the dark, baby?"

"You said God was watching me all the time, so I thought I would come in here and give him a rest."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Absentminded.

The Professor—My dear madam, this is really a very dainty rug. I congratulate you upon it.

A Third Chance.

"I can give you a position in my bank, but you will have to wait for promotion until somebody dies or resigns."

"Don't you ever have any defaulters?"—Town Topics.

Not a Bad Reason.

"Why don't you shave yourself?"

"Because I can't find that there is any more satisfaction in cutting myself than in having a barber cut me."—Chicago Post.

A LINGERING COUGH

The cough that holds on in spite of all remedies needs energetic and above all thorough treatment. A mere cough mixture won't do. Root out the cold that causes the cough.

How? Scott's Emulsion. Why Scott's Emulsion? Because it stops the irritation, soothes the tissues and heals the affected membranes. When? Right away. Scott's Emulsion begins to help with the first dose.

People who have used Scott's Emulsion will not be satisfied with any of the numerous substitutes that are offered in the form of wines, extracts, cordials, etc. When life and health are at stake it is unwise to experiment with unknown and untried preparations.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

ART LOAN

EXHIBITION OPENED TUESDAY AFTERNOON AT 2 O'CLOCK

In the Parlors of the First Presbyterian Church—A Fine Collection of Specimens.

Those who delight in the collection of articles of curiosity and of relics of antiquity will certainly appreciate the magnificent collection of articles of this class on exhibition this week at the Loan Display in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church. The doors were opened to the public at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and will be open afternoons and evenings until the latter part of the week.

The women of the church have gathered together a most excellent and most varied abundance of articles. Old china ware, some 300 years old, Bibles and other books some 500 years of age, Indian and Philippine articles, examples of art and fine needle work, rare and curious jewelry, Chinese vases, family heir-looms and the possessions of former generations are arranged in a systematic profusion that is pleasing and highly instructive.

The people have been generous in loaning articles for the display. All of the articles, many of which are of great intrinsic value, but priceless to the owners because of their history, will be carefully guarded. A special policeman will be on duty both day and night and everything will be protected.

The Dutch government objects to the site selected for Carnegie's proposed palace of peace because it considers that the building would detract from the picturesqueness of the surroundings.
